Leeds Chinese Student & Scholars Association

CSSA-Leeds is short for Chinese Student and Scholar Association of University of Leeds. The committees of CSSA are voluntarily organised to unite and help Chinese students in Leeds.

Our commitment is to help protect the rights and interests of students and scholars, enriching the communication of them and promoting communication between China and England, both in academic term and social life.

As the one and the only official Chinese students' society acknowledged by Chinese Embassy in Leeds area, with the help of those scholars from Chinese Consulate of Manchester, we will try our best and get better time by time.

Leeds Community Mandarin School

LCMCS (Leeds Community Mandarin Chinese School, formerly known as Leeds CSSA Chinese School) is a Saturday school that teaches Chinese language to children and young people. As a voluntary youth organization, we encourage and support them to understand various aspects of Chinese culture. We also aim to develop their emotional stability and to stimulate their talents, self-esteem and confidence. LCMCS is a joint initiative between the Yorkshire Chinese community and Prince Henry's Grammar School Specialist Language College, Otley. We have been benefiting from staff support to professional advices from PHGS. We have also been supported by Education Leeds including premises for running our classes. The School has been using the name of LCMCS since September 2000.

THE LIFE – Mr Man Chiu Leung 梁文釗的一生

KITCHEN KING: Man Chiu Leung at the Leeds Chinese Community

Association centre on North Street.

Published on Wednesday 18 January 2012

Man Chiu Leung is director and secretary of the Leeds Chinese Community Association. Born in Hong Kong, he moved to Britain at the age of 23 to work in the textile industry. Now 62, he lives in Moortown with wife Lai Hong, a former nurse. The couple have two grown-up children – Caroline, who works for Bradford City Council and Timothy, an accountant in London.

Interview by Grant Woodward.

“My childhood was a happy one, even though we didn’t have much. Hong Kong was a very crowded place – and after the Communists took over China in 1949 a lot of refugees fled to Hong Kong. Up to the age of 14 I grew up in a flat that my grandad rented and sub-let to other families. There were three bedrooms and four families were living there – 21 of us in total. There was even a mother and daughter living under the stairs. And there was no bathroom in those days, just a bucket in the kitchen. I went to school at different times to my brothers and sisters because there weren’t enough places for everyone.

“The thing I’m most proud of, recently at least, is appearing with Jamie Oliver on his programme Jamie’s Great Britain. I love cooking and he came here to the community centre in North Street when we were serving lunch to 40 people. He seemed a very down to earth chap. My son and daughter both watched it and were very proud of me.

“The one thing I couldn’t live without is food. I cook for the senior citizens twice a week – every Tuesday and Friday. I can cook English food as well as Chinese. I enjoy making trifles and Victoria sponge cakes, but I’m a very poor pastry chef.

“I came to Britain to study textiles at Leicester Polytechnic and then in 1969 I got a job in the textile industry in Leeds, which is all gone now.

I worked at West Riding Fabrics in Guiseley, starting on the machines and eventually ending up in the office as a planner. “The last time I cried was about four years ago when I finally made peace with my son, who died of cot death when he was just four weeks old. He died a few weeks before Christmas in 1981 and then shortly afterwards someone set fire to the clothing workshop that I had at the time. I didn’t cry and my wife was upset that I didn’t seem to mourn my son, but we had our daughter and I was trying to keep everything together. I had been so busy when he was born that I never really cuddled him at all. That is my biggest regret. It was only in 2008 one day when my wife had gone to work that I spoke to him and said sorry for the fact that I couldn’t mourn him when he passed away. It was only then that I started to cry.

“There are around 5,000 Chinese people in Leeds, which is nothing like somewhere like Manchester which has at least 20,000. We are quite a small community and very scattered but it would be nice if there was a Chinatown in the city centre. A lot of Chinese businesses have been knocked down to make way for the Eastgate development, so it would be good if something was done as part of that. “The new year is very important to Chinese people and we will be marking it with a big celebration at Leeds Town Hall for up to 1,200 people.
